Oct 24, 2019 No 4: AutoCAD is not a Design drawing solution. It doesn't open 3D drawing files. AutoCAD does not support polygonal modeling. Oct 24, 2019 No 3: If you want to create a full-fledged 3D product design environment for your business, check out Solidworks or Pro/E. If you want a quick glance at the CAD drawings and want to manually edit them, check out DraftSight. Oct 24, 2019 No 2: CAD and drafting software is not a low-cost alternative to buy a 3D printer. While using Spring MVC I have a good understanding of, how to use @Repository classes. Now I am trying to use plain JPA annotations in my project without Spring MVC. To avoid using any annotations I did the following: I make a DAO method that inserts a row to database, and have it returns the ID. I have a service class that uses the DAO to get the ID and stores it in a instance variable for later use. Then, when the user hits a button I fire a JSF @ModelAttribute("new_value") parameter that passes to my backing bean the value. The backing bean then performs an update of the database and invokes a service method that will undo the changes made by the DAO. This is working well in a web app with NO Spring. But I am having trouble when using JPA annotations, because the transaction is not disposed of. So, when the DAO returns it returns the ID. How can I solve this? For example: @Transactional public Long getUserID (MyUser user){ em.persist(user); em.flush(); return user.getID
